ADDRESS BY MATT THOMAS

SETS FORTH REASONS FOR SPIRIT OF DAY.

Especially appropriate to Thanksgiving day was the service held yesterday at the tabernacle, the exercises starting shortly after noon and lasting about an hour. There was an organ recital, made up of several choice numbers, given by Professor J. J. McClellan, organist; two solos by Mrs. Lizzie Thomas Edward, and a brief address on the spirit of the day by Mathonihah Thom-The order of the exercises was as

"My friends, it is a long cry from today to the first Thanksgiving day in 1621," said Mr. Thomas, in opening his address, "but it does not need the eye of the seer or a mind touched with divine power to show what we have to be thankful for. As a nation we have cause to be thankful. We have been prosperous during the year, and we have been at peace with others. The world as a whole has been at peace during most of the year, and has been progressing as fast perhaps as has been

Spirit of Peace.

The speaker said the spirit of peace is permeating the world today, is entering into the cabinets of the nations and into the minds of the great men of the day. He said the American nation is acquiring the spirit of adjusting its difficulties among its own individuals and with other nations, matters of great moment having been adjusted by arbitration. He said that it is necessary only to look at the last few pages of the history of the nation to see how it has grown in this respect.

Mr. Thomas said the nation has cause to be thankful for the provision made in the constitution by its founders, that the nation should not interfere with the exercise of religious liberty by any Individual. He said this provision led to the statement on the part of some that the refusal of the government to take any part in any religion might be looked upon as irreverence. He said that the spirit which underlies this was not irreverence, however, but perfect freedom. Today men worship how, when and where they wish. The country protects the individual in this right, so long as he does not interfere with the

The nation also has the right of free Mr. Thomas said, and it speaks greatly for the intelligence of the people when it can be said that rarely is this right abused. The nation, he pointed out, also has cause to be thankful for the growth of education, the spirit of education having advanced among the residents of the land to a great extent. Compulsory education has been established, nevermore to be taken away from the people. The world, Mr. Thomas said, has just been shocked by the death of a man who seemed to stand for educational development and advancement. Traveling Public Suspend Usual Work on Holiday.

Thanksgiving day in the hotels and their corridors was spent quietly. The traveling men took their day off and spent the time resting from their usual arduous labors. There were comparatively few out-of-town visitors registered. There were several songs on the program, after which candy was passed to the old people.

Anyhow, the city jail prisoners surrounded a festive bench with tin plates which staggered under their burden, and everybody wanted to pat H. F. Wilkinson, the jailer, on the back after it was all over. The Salvation Army added a dessert of fruit and nuts.

Under the direction of Deputy Sheriff Joe Burbidge, 86 prisoners at the county jail were given a Thanksgiving feast yesterday afternoon that included chicken, mashed potatoes and cranberry sauce. The latter dish puzzled some of the prisoners not a little and brought reminiscences that would do no harm.

Dumplings, pie and fruit cake finished off a dinner that many a man outside of jail would have been lucky to have had. Prisoners were allowed to mingle together in the corridors, and many were the packages of fruit and other good things received from friends during the day.

SLIGHT FREEDOM FOR PRISONERS OF STATE

Thanksgiving Day at Penitentiary Is Occasion for Relaxing Rigid Discipline.

"'Way Down Upon the Swanee River," n happy-hearted negro melody to the acompaniment of a banjo mingled with companiment of a banjo mingled with shouts of "Hit him in the solar," "That'll get his goat," "It's a shame to do it," caused more than one citizen to glance with panic-stricken apprehension towards the grim, gray walls of the state prison yesterday afternoon, momentarily expecting to see a stream of stripe-clad men come pouring over the walls to freedom. But within the prison, for all the alarming sounds that emanated from the interior, the thought of escaping was perhaps never further from the long-time men. Men who have for long months worked stolidly side by side, their tightly drawn lips uttering only muttered whispers or relaxed to address a guard, on yesterday knew all the gladness of restraint removed.

Stringed instruments and voices long pent up rang through the surprised corridors, while groups of men gathered here and there around improvised prize rings and saw their fellows contest for supremacy with the boxing gloves. Such songs as had not been forgotten came with all the strength and vigor of scores of male voices.

New arrivals sang songs which their fellows heard and applauded for the first time. Men who have been behind the bars for years heard popular ditties that stirred their blood and brought longings anew for the outside world.

No service of any kind was held in the prison. In charge of the guards, the prisoners were allowed all of the freedom that can be given behind the walls and bars. Many of the men added to the general entertainment with stringed instruments and others accompanied with singing. Bexing gloves and games were allowed and cramped muscles found delightful relaxation in a form of exercise that has long been denied.

All of this was only the "topping off" of a Thanksgiving dinner worthy the name. Roast pork with sage dressing was followed by apple sauce and mashed potatoes with brown gravy. Hot rolls and butter, pickles, cookies, coffee, orangus and bananas made up the rest of the
